The Economies of Remnant Day

Are very great, and the low prices on the Remnant Merchandise for tomorrow will convince every one of the wisdom of purchasing these items. No better evidence could be offered of the complete disposal of each season's stock in the season for which it was bought than by the comparatively small number of remnants now remaining in winter merchandise.

FISH FOR THE LENTEN TABLE.

The Lenten season is a trying one for the housekeeper who caters to those who forego meat to any extent. It is difficult enough to make out a daily menu with all the resources of the market at one's disposal, but when the meat course is eliminated the task of planning daily meals is truly overwhelming.

Pish, of course, now becomes the most important article of diet and upon the important article of diet and upon the separately in oiled paper and fry in Pish, of course, now becomes the most important article of diet, and upon the variety of ways of serving it and the elimination of the objectionable fishy smell and taste will depend a house-wife's success in offering all forms of sea food. The following recipes have been selected with the view of assisting her in this very way.

For instance, herring is universally liked, but many cooks insist upon always frying it, with bread crumbs, and people have come to believe, many of liked, but many cooks insist upon always frying it, with bread crumbs, and people have come to believe, many of them, that this is the only edible way of cooking the fish. The following mode will be welcomed as a change:

BROILED HERRING WITH MUSTARD SAUCE.—Choose fresh herring with soft roes, cut off head, clean, but do not open. Dip them in olive oil, season well with salt and pepper, and leave them to absorb the seasoning for at least an hour. Broil them on a gridiron over a slow, clear fire until done—fifteen minutes is usually sufficient time—and in the process they should be turned often. Place the herrings on a hot dish and pour over them this sauce: One teaspoonful of flour and one tablespoon ful of mustard, rubbed smooth in cold water. Add one cup of white stock, and place over the fire until it bolls and becomes thick. Then add one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, pepper and salt to taste. Just before serving add one ounce of melted butter, stir well and serve with the that the ships were ordered to take up the designated positions to safeguard

BAKED SHAD WITH GERMAN

BAKED SHAD WITH GERMAN SAUCE.—Clean a small shad, wash and dry it, and place in a well buttered baking dish which has deep sides. Season with a pinch of sait, a small pinch of pepper, and add two finely chopped shallots and one-half wineglassful of white wine. Cover with a buttered paper and cook in a moderate oven for twenty-five minutes. When done, lift the fish to a hot plate, pour the liquor into a saucepan, add one-half pint of German sauce and a small quantity of spinach. Cook the sauce a few minutes, then strain a little over the fish and serve the remainder in a sauceboat. Mackerel marinated is a delicately cooked fish. A fish kettle fitted with a drainer should be filled with enough weak broth to cover a dozen mackerel. Add three small onions, a bunch of sweet herbs, half a cup of vinegar. and serve the remainder in a sauceboat.

Oysters come to the assistance of the much-tried housewife in a variety of delictous possibilities. Curried oysters will be welcomed for their musual flavor. Fry a moderate-sized Spanish onion till well browned in some butter, ettir in three tablespoonfuls of curry powler, and mix well over the fire. Pour in gradually a sufficient quantity of broth, add a grated coconaut and a-very sour apple—or two tamarinds. If they can be obtained—and boil until the cocoanut is tender. Thicken with a little water, season with salt, stir and boil for five minutes. The oysters should be placed in a stewpan with two or three seeded tomatoes, the milk of the occoanut and the oyster liquor. Stew for a few minutes and add to the other mixture. Squeeze in the juice of a lemon, turn the curry on a hot dish, garnish with croutons and serve with a separate dish of rice.

Spiced oysters should be made the day before they are required. Place a hundred with their strained liquor in an earthenware jar, add half a numeg grated, eighteen cloves, four blades of mace, a tenspoonful of all-spice, a dash of cayenne pepper, one teaspoonful of salt and two tables.

fore serving add one ounce of melted butter, stir well and serve with the Were I to be exiled and confined for butter, stir well and serve with the herring.

Even the most delicate appetites cannot be offended with impunity at the German way of serving perch. Two moderately large perch are sufficient for the usual sized family. They should be scalded, cleaned and placed in a stewpan. Add to the fish some finely minced red parts of carrots, some roots of parsley and celery, together with a bunch of parsley, one onion and a little salt. Cover the whole with white wine and boll over a moderate fire for twenty minutes. When the fish is cooked remove from the vegetables, drain and placed on a hot dish. Take from the stewpan the onions and parsley, and add finely minced mushrooms—the raw ones are best—and cook the whole for five minutes. Then thicken slightly with flour which has been stirred with butter. Remove the stewpan from the fire, add more butter, the strained juice of two lemons, and pour the whole over the fish and serve.

The Lenten fast is considerably brightened for all by the seasonable shad. This fish is at its—best at this time, and in no style is it more delicious than baked and served with a rich sauce.

Were I to be exiléd and confined for the rest of my life to one country, I should choose Peru. Here is every altitude, every climate, every scene. Coastal Peru is an Egypt, central Peru a Tibet, eastern Peru a Kongo country. The lifeless desert and the teening jungle, the hottest lowlands and the bleakest highlands, heaven-piercing peaks and rivers raging through and the highest tillage, the highest with the highest tillage, the highest mines, the highest tillage, the high the rest of my life to one country, I
